We advocate for a shift from institutional models of care to person-directed values and practices that put the person first. Person-directed care is structured around the unique needs, preferences, and desires of the individual in question. The measurements for quality outcomes are based on well-being.

Well-being, as a frame of reference, requires us to focus on the strengths, possibilities, dreams, and goals of each individual. Well-being is the ultimate outcome of a human life. The Eden Alternative® has identified seven primary domains of well-being: identity, autonomy, security, connectedness, meaning, and joy. We use these domains to guide us in the assessment/evaluation process of each individual.
